AN ACT to renumber and amend 66.0401 (1); to amend 66.0401 (2) and

66.0403 (1) (m); to repeal and recreate 196.378 (4) (title); and to create

15.797, 23.39, 66.0401 (1e), 66.0401 (3), 66.0401 (4), 66.0401 (5), 66.0401 (6),

196.378 (4g) and 196.491 (3) (dg) of the statutes; relating to: regulation of wind energy systems and granting rule-making authority.

Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Under current law, a city, village, town, or county (political subdivision) may not place any restrictions on the installation or use of an energy system (a solar energy system or a wind energy system) unless the restriction is for health or safety reasons, does not significantly increase the cost of the system or decrease its efficiency, or allows for an alternative comparable system. Current law defines "wind energy system" as equipment that converts and then stores or transfers energy from the wind into usable forms of energy.

This substitute amendment requires the Public Service Commission (PSC) to promulgate rules establishing common standards for political subdivisions to regulate the construction and operation of wind energy systems. The substitute amendment also revises the definition of "wind energy system" to include associated facilities of the equipment specified under current law. The PSC's rules must specify the restrictions a political subdivision may impose on the installation or use of such The subject matter of the rules must include the following: 1) a system. decommissioning, which is defined as removing wind turbines, buildings, cables, electrical components, roads, and other associated facilities that are located at the site of a wind energy system, as well as restoring the site; and 2) setback requirements that reasonably protect against health effects, including those from noise and shadow flicker, that are associated with wind energy systems. The bill also allows the rules to include subjects such as visual appearance, setback distances, decommissioning, shadow flicker, electrical connections to the power grid, and interference with radio, telephone, or television signals. In addition, the PSC must promulgate rules requiring an owner of a wind energy system with a nominal operating capacity of at least one megawatt to maintain proof of financial responsibility for decommissioning the wind energy system. The PSC must also promulgate rules specifying requirements and procedures for a political subdivision to enforce such restrictions.

If a political subdivision chooses to regulate such systems, its ordinances may not be more restrictive than the PSC rules. The substitute amendment also specifies various standards, precedures for applicants, and approval timelines for political subdivisions that must be contained in a political subdivision's ordinance regulating the systems.

The substitute amendment prohibits a political subdivision from prohibiting or restricting any person from conducting tests to determine the suitability of a site for the possible placement of a wind energy system, although the political subdivision may petition the PSC to impose reasonable restrictions on the testing.

The substitute amendment provides that any person who is aggrieved by a political subdivision's decision or enforcement action may seek review by the PSC. If the PSC determines that the political subdivision's decision or enforcement action does not comply with the agency's rules or is unreasonable, it must issue a superseding decision and order an appropriate remedy. The PSC's decision or order may be appealed to circuit court.

The substitute amendment specifies that if a county enacts an ordinance relating to the construction or operation of a wind energy system, as provided by the substitute amendment, the county ordinance applies only in the unincorporated parts of the county, except that if a town enacts a similar ordinance, the more restrictive terms of the two ordinances apply to the town.

The substitute amendment also creates a 15-member wind siting council consisting of two wind energy system representatives; one town representative; one county representative; two energy industry representatives: two environmental group representatives; two realtor representatives; two landowners living adjacent to or in the vicinity of a wind energy system; two public members; and one University of Wisconsin System faculty member with expertise regarding the health impacts of wind energy systems. The PSC appoints the members for three-year terms. The substitute amendment requires the PSC to obtain the advice of the council in promulgating rules under the substitute amendment. In addition, the council must survey (peer-reviewed scientific research on the health impacts of wind energy systems, as well as national and state regulatory developments regarding the siting of wind energy systems, and submit a report to the legislature every five years describing the research and developments and recommending legislation based on the research and developments.

Finally, the substitute amendment does not affect a provision under current law that exempts certain electric generating facilities from local ordinances. Under current law, a person may not construct an electric generating facility with a nominal operating capacity of 100 megawatts or more unless the PSC grants a certificate of public convenience and necessity (CPCN) to the person. If the PSC has granted a CPCN to such a facility, and if installation or utilization of the facility is precluded or inhibited by a local ordinance, current law provides that the installation and utilization of the facility may nevertheless proceed. Because this substitute amendment does not affect that provision, the authority of a political subdivision to regulate a wind energy system under the substitute amendment is limited to those wind energy systems with a nominal operating capacity of less than 100 megawatts. However, the substitute amendment requires the PSC to consider the restrictions specified in the rules described above when the PSC determines whether to grant a CPCN to a wind energy system with a nominal operating capacity of 100 megawatts or more.

The people of the state of Wisconsin, represented in senate and assembly, do enact as follows:

15.137(6) ECTION 1. If the statutes is created to read: Education (1) WIND SITING COUNCIL. (a) In this subsection, "wind
